Richard Susskind

Professor Richard Susskind is an author, speaker, and independent adviser to major professional firms and to national governments.

His main area of expertise is the future of professional service and, in particular, the way in which IT and the Internet are changing the work of lawyers. He is President of the Society for Computers and Law, IT Adviser to the Lord Chief Justice of England, and Chair of the Advisory Board of the Oxford Internet Institute at Oxford University.

Richard Susskind lectures internationally and has been invited to speak in more than 40 countries and has addressed audiences (in person and electronically), numbering more than 300,000. He has written and edited numerous books, including The Future of Law (OUP, 1996), Transforming the Law (OUP, 2000), The End of Lawyers? (OUP, 2008), and Tomorrow’s Lawyers (2013), and has written about 150 columns for The Times. His work has been translated into 10 languages.

Richard Susskind holds professorships at Oxford University; University College, London; Gresham College, London; and Strathclyde University in his native city, Glasgow. Richard has a doctorate in computers and law from Balliol College, Oxford. He is also a Fellow of the Royal Society of Edinburgh, a Fellow of the British Computer Society, and was awarded an OBE in the Millennium New Year’s Honours List for services to IT in the Law and to the Administration of Justice.