Leona Forman

Ms. Forman is the founding President and CEO of the Brazil Foundation, an organization that generates resources for programs that promote social change in Brazil. She established the Brazil Foundation after retiring from a twenty-year career at the United Nations. As chief of Information Centers Services at the UN, Forman managed a network of seventy public information centers around the world. Prior to that, she headed the Department of Public Information's section for non-governmental organizations, working closely with more than 1,600 associated NGOs in all regions of the world. Before joining the UN, Leona was cultural correspondent for O Globo in France and a writer for the magazine Realidade, from Chicago and East Timor.
