The Death Penalty: Law, Politics and Morality

Professor Sandra Babcock

Sandra Babcock is a Clinical Professor of Law and the Clinical Director of the Center for International Human Rights at Northwestern Law School of Law. She specializes in international human rights litigation, access to justice, death penalty defense, and the application of international law in U.S. courts. Professor Babcock began her career as a staff attorney at the Texas Resource Center, a non-profit dedicated to defending men and women facing the death penalty in Texas. She later spent five years working as a trial-level public defender in Minnesota before launching a private practice in international human rights and criminal law. From 2000-2006 she served as director of the Mexican Capital Legal Assistance Program. For her work, she was awarded the Aguila Azteca, the highest honor bestowed by the government of Mexico upon citizens of foreign countries, in 2003.
