

OBAMA'S WAR ON TERROR: CHANGE WE CAN BELIEVE IN ?

HUMAN RIGHTS LECTURE WITH

David D. Cole

John Carroll Research Professor of Law,
Georgetown University Law Center

David Cole teaches constitutional law, national security law, and criminal justice at Georgetown University Law Center. He is also a volunteer attorney for the Center for Constitutional Rights, the legal affairs correspondent for The Nation, a regular contributor to the New York Review of Books, and a commentator on National Public Radio's All Things Considered.

Cole is a prolific scholar and is the author of six books, including Less Safe, Less Free: Why America Is Losing the War on Terror, published in 2007, and co-authored with Jules Lobel, which won the Palmer Civil Liberties Prize for best book on national security and civil liberties. He has also published widely in law journals and the popular press, including the Yale Law Journal, California Law Review, Stanford Law Review, New York Times, Washington Post, Wall Street Journal, and Los Angeles Times.

New York Times columnist Anthony Lewis has called Cole "one of the country's great legal voices for civil liberties today," and Nat Hentoff has called him "a one-man Committee of Correspondence in the tradition of patriot Sam Adams." He has received numerous national awards for his human rights work.
